

Storing Tents

When you have finished camping remember that the storage of your tent will ensure that your tent will provide camping service for many years. It is important that your tent is dry when you store it away for the season. When you return home from camping set your tent up in your yard for 3 - 4 days to make sure it is well aired out. Make sure that you have cleaned the inside floor of your tent because all that grass and debris will eventually cause damage to your tent. Make sure that any food that has been in the tent also be removed. When you pack your tent away make sure that all the parts and pieces are together and ready for the next year. Finally store your tent in a place that is free of dampness and in an area that it will be safe from any animals that may be attracted your tent and do damage.

Check list make sure tent is dry before you pack it away for the season make sure that the tent has been cleaned the inside floor completely make sure that any food that has been consumed in the tent be clean throughly pack your tent in a dry, animal free place